

Four archetypes. Infinite variations.

Every person who has ever submitted to ARXEVO falls within one of four fundamental orientations. But your archetype is not your identity — it is the lens through which you engage with the world. Two Catalysts from different continents may share the same orientation and have nothing else in common.

01

Architect

Strategy, systems, long-term thinking. Building structures.

"You saw the system before anyone else noticed it was broken."

02

Catalyst

Creativity, disruption, innovation. Questioning norms.

"You have never accepted the world as it was handed to you."

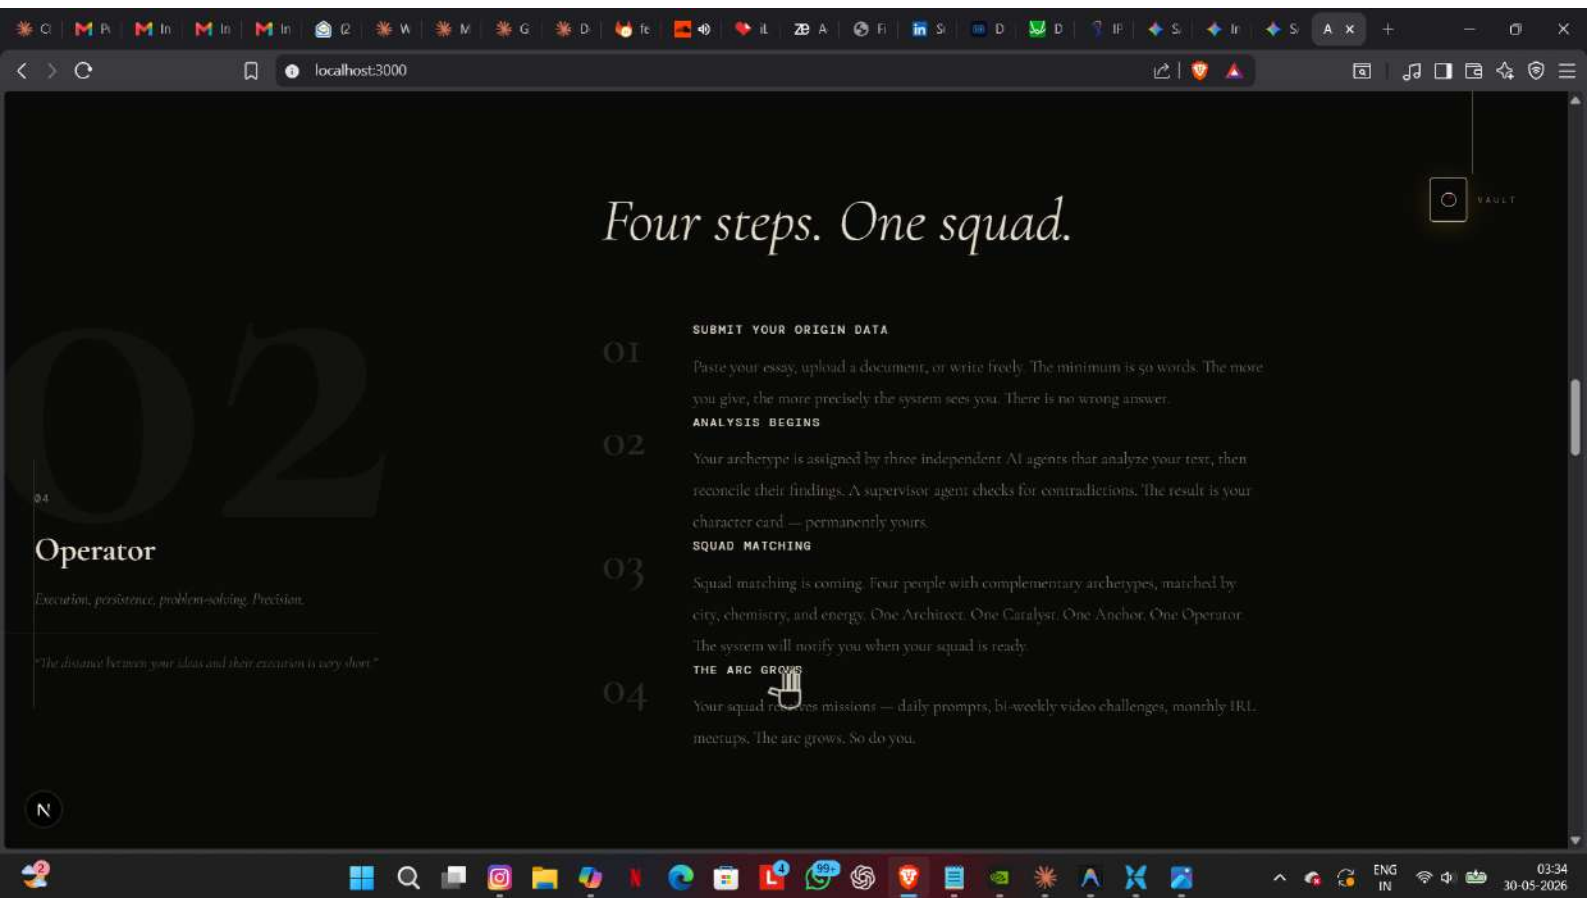

03

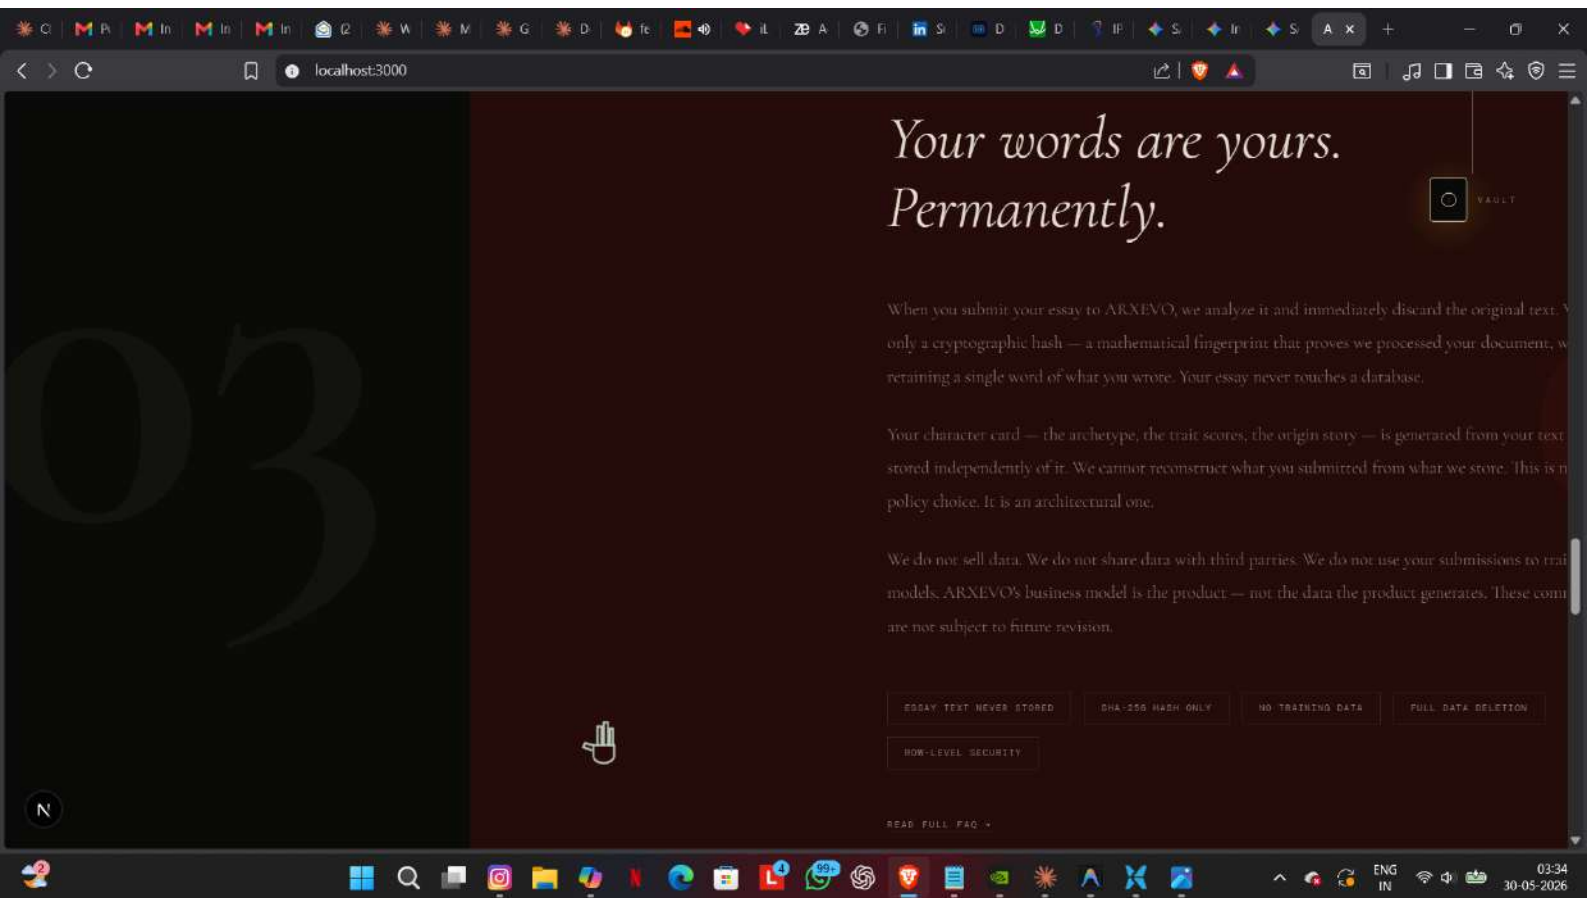

Anchor

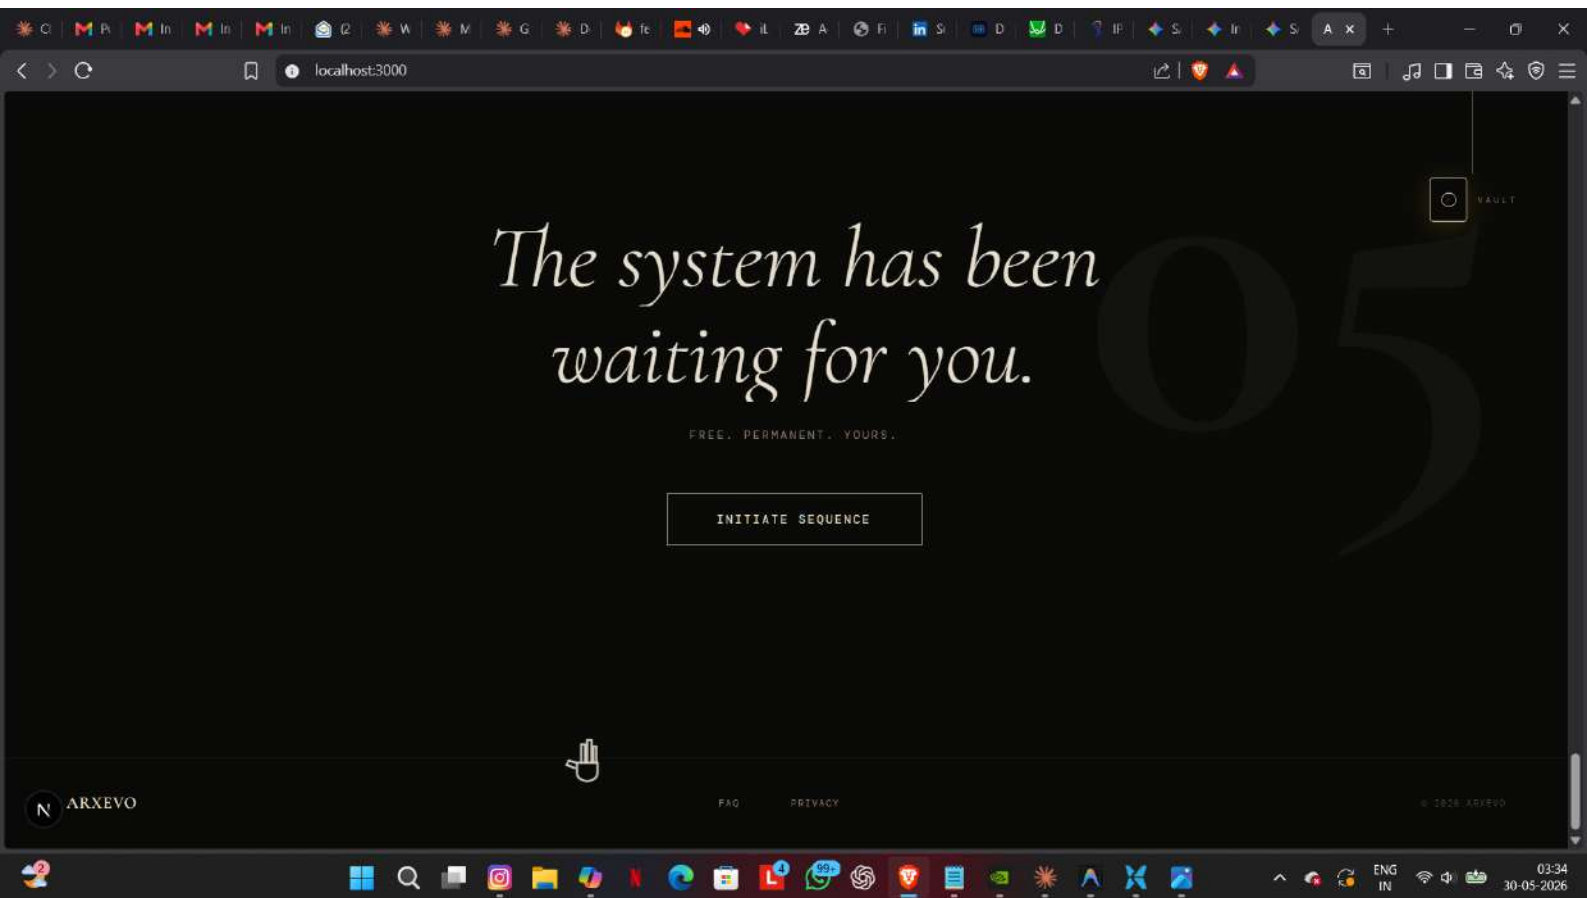

Empathy, community, relationships. Emotional depth.

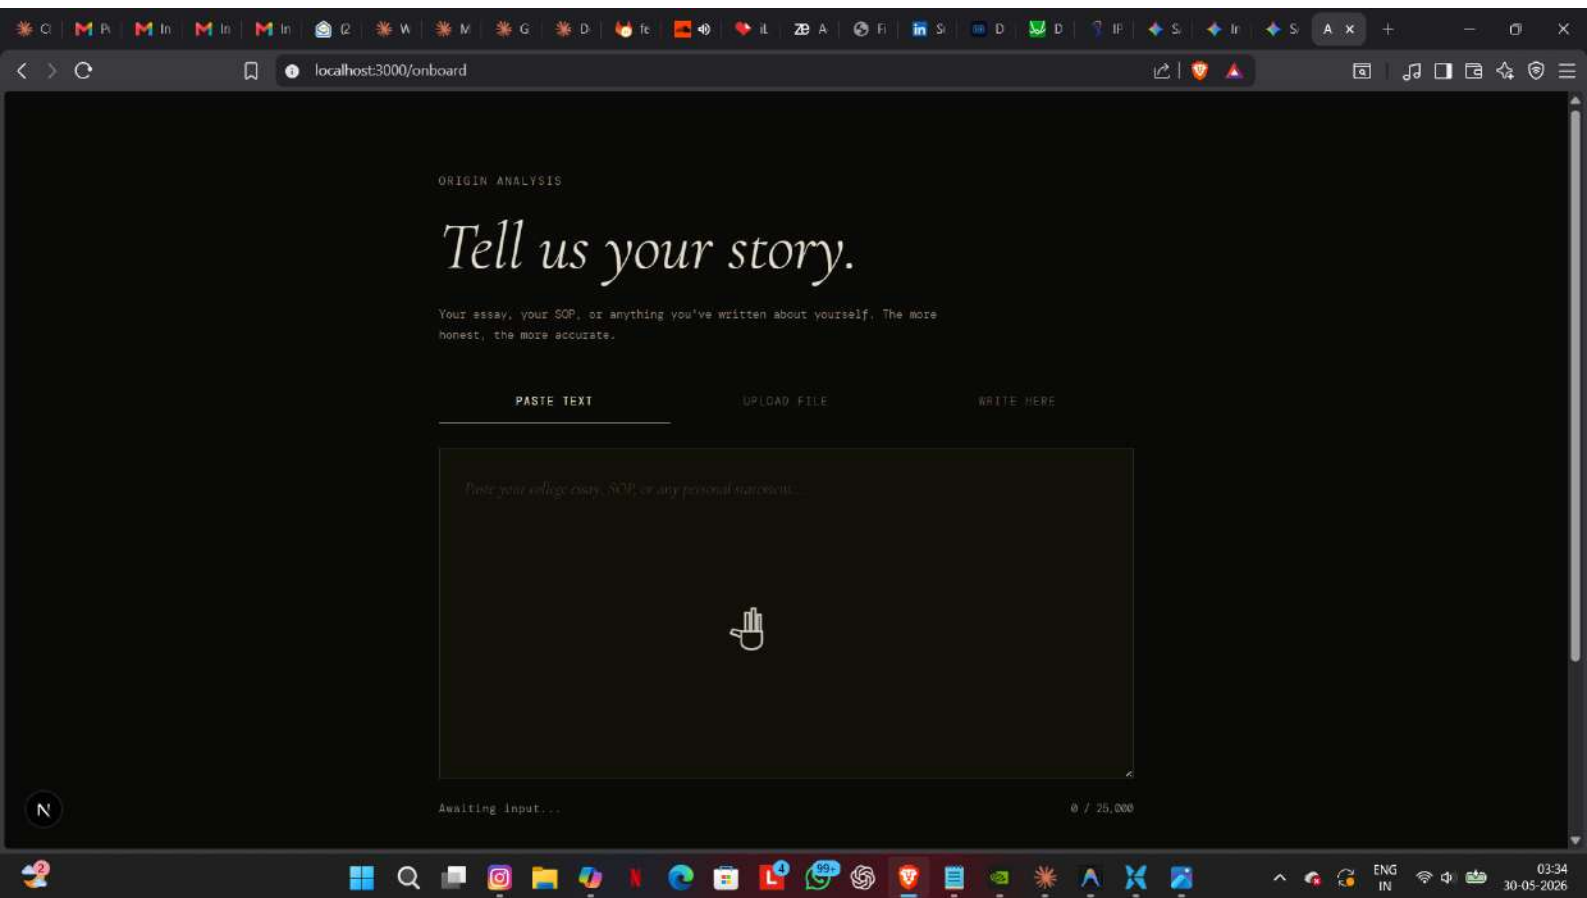

"People tell you things they have never told anyone else."

How we handle your data.

01 WHAT WE COLLECT

When you create an account, we collect your email address and display name. When you submit an essay for analysis, we process its contents to generate your archetype, trait scores, and origin story.

We store your generated character card data — archetype, secondary archetype, trait scores (eight dimensions, 0–100), origin story text, and key themes. We also store a SHA-256 hash of your submitted essay to detect duplicate submissions.

We collect basic usage data: timestamps of account creation and submissions, the number of analyses you have run, and standard server logs (IP address, browser type, request timestamps). These logs are retained for 90 days and then automatically deleted.
